(Leader In Training)

I'm a Leader In Training, because I know Shabaka Nubian YI Is my daddy,

I'm not proud to say that but it's the truth and sadly, and I know it, and sometimes the truth hurts but not as much as knowing your biological father is a killer, but just because I'm his daughter doesn't mean I'm his actions.

But I have made some very bad one's in my past.

But I can say that I've learned from what I've done.

But knowing that MY father was doing all that bad stuff and not having remorse

For his actions, just motivates me to do and be everything he didn't want to be and everything he wasn't, and in the end we'll see who's winning.

But because me and my brother didn't have fathers nor a family, we got chosen.

Adopted.

Me and my older brother got chosen by God himself and that's something I am proud to say.

Because God is good, and was there for me more than any person was ever in my whole life, he saw the best in me and gave me a family, a second chance at living the life my real father couldn't provide for me, and that has been a very big impact on me and my big brothers life.

He was and still is the father my dad couldn't be and will never be.

And that's the real reason why I'm happy today.

He has given me more love than any human ever could.

But I see him through my mother because in a child's eyes the parents are god.

I can say, that I have been through a lot of things in my lifetime things that aren't good things.

But because of all that he has brought me through

In that process I was able to discover something I never knew I was capable of doing, which was writing poems, but not just any poems, strong deep, truth telling poems about the things I've been through and writing was a way for me to channel my anger and my thoughts it was way for me a struggling teen to share with the world my story in writing.

How I felt deep down inside, and to let other young teens who are struggling like me

Not to fear because it gets better in the end it might not start to show immediately, but it will surely come, but in order for things to get better he wants you to give up the things you love the most and give them to him and just trust that he will bring you through and to just have faith.

And that just because you see others doing things that aren't right doesn't mean follow.

Take action and be a leader.
